Transparency into airline fees

AIRPLUS. WHAT TRAVEL PAYMENT IS ALL ABOUT.

Presenting the AirPlus Ancillary Fee Reports – giving you the information you need to understand how ancillary fees impact your business travel program's bottom line.

With the number of ancillary fees charged by airlines today, and as that number steadily increases, AirPlus now offers corporate travel managers a way to achieve greater transparency into what types of fees a company's business travelers are incurring during travel today.

Ancillary fees are posing a challenge to companies because of the industry's rapid growth of these fees and the lack of a cohesive and consistent way of reporting. Ascertaining true trip costs as well as monitoring travel expenses and policy compliance (especially relating to upgrades and luggage charges) can often prove difficult. Most often, these types of fees roll up into costs that have not been planned nor budgeted for. Further, they often cannot be reported on, used in negotiations nor referenced against travel policy.

Travel Managers may feel at a loss when trying to get a handle on such reports, but the AirPlus Ancillary Fee Reports can make that a feeling of the past.

Ancillary Fees

The AirPlus Solution

The AirPlus Ancillary Fee Reports are designed specifically for corporate travel managers to gain insight into these costs! A set of summary level reports can be produced monthly for AirPlus Corporate Card customers. These detailed reports are based on a company's AirPlus Corporate Card data. These reports are compiled using reporting information from the major US airlines and include hundreds of different fee types. For example, baggage fees, penalty fees, onboard meals, reward purchases, service fees and many more.

Five Detailed Reports

The standard set of AirPlus Ancillary Fee Reports consists of five detailed reports bringing transparency to the following types of fees on a monthly basis:

- > Awards
- > Baggage
- > Service Fees
- > Onboard
- > Miscellaneous

These reports include robust details for further data mining and reporting. They include the type of fee, the airline, the ticket/document number of the fee, the passenger name and amount. This data is useful for budgeting a company's future travel program spend and may prove useful supplier negotiations.
